Despite everything went wrong, life is totally unbalanced and I fucked up everything the thought of committing suicide never cross my mind and I've been wondering why?.

Is it because of the way I was raised? The region I was born into? Or my views about living in this world? I still wonder why?.

Is my time worth than thinking about suicide or I was used to enjoying happiness and sorrowfulness of this life? I still wonder why?.

I've been reading and hearing stories of people who've committed suicide because of misery or depression and I felt pity for them, but still I wonder why the thought of committing suicide never cross mind.

Huh!

Okay, Okay, let me think a little.

Oh! Wow I now know why, yes yes I now know why.

It's because of the valuableness and worthiness of my life, my life really matters the most, if I am alive I can overcome all the challenges of this life but if I killed myself I ended what is not mine that means I come to this world as a looser and left it as a looser.

My life is not mine, I've no right or authority to kill myself because so far I've overcome so many challenges, the first challenge is during my transformation period while I'm in my mother's womb.

This shows that I was born to get used to the fuck up of this life. I was born to fight all the challenges of this life and stand on my foot no matter how bad this life fucked up the shit out of me.

Imagine everything is not going normal in my life. I was living below $1 per day and I was nobody and don't think of being so, I have no enough funds, no luxury clothes, no access to even mobile phone, have you thought of living in muddy house? Well, I lived there.

Despite all these fuck up things I was thankful, I don't let stupid little problems stuck in my head and cause me worries or anxieties, I am doing my best to live this life to it's fullest, then how can idea of committing suicide develop in my mind?.

Just because of some little life challenges don't ruin your life, be thankful for being alive and healthy dude.

I once went to hospital where fractured people get treatment, I was taken by patients condition there and that makes me thankful and I came to realize how worthy being alive and healthy means.

I also went to another hospital where burnt people get treatment, Man it’s so so bad, seeing people like me in that kind of severe health condition, I compare myself and them and thank god for being healthy.

I once asked one burnt middle-aged man, “between living in his condition with 1 Billion in his bank account and being healthy, unburnt with 1 thousand in his account which one will he choose?”.

He said, “Young man how can you compare my this condition with common 1 Billion? I swear if 1 Billion will revert my once beautiful brown skin and healthy nerves back their previous state I’m willing to spend more than it.”

He added, “I’ve plenty of money but I’m not in normal condition to enjoy them, but see you young man, you don’t have even 500k but you’re enjoying your life.”

He also added, “Young man now you’re healthy but you won’t understand how good it feels to be healthy until when you’re unhealthy. Just be thankful for being alive and healthy just me, despite these burnt body I was thankful for being alive.”

I was amazed by hearing his reply on being healthy. While doing nothing at home today, the word “suicide” pops into my mind.

Then how can you think of taking your own life while you really know that if you can act with little bit smartness you can move freely from your current state?.

Imagine someone who lives in muddy house, spend less than $1 per day, despite that he don’t let suicide idea develops in his mind.

He is enjoying his life to its fullest, he is happy and joyful person then what about you? How worthy you think your life is? Do you think suicide is the best solution?.

Remember your life is worth than anything you can own in this world. Tomorrow you can be billionaire but you can’t buy a soul, you’ll witness the soul of your loved one living his body but you can’t buy it or take it back.

If you die today, family, friends and relative will mourn only for some days, afterwards they’ll forget about you and move on with their lives.

Then imagine taking your own life! You bought shame to your family, you’ll be an example to all people of your community. They’ll never look at how much state of depression or misery you’re into before you decided to commit suicide.

They’ll only call you a looser, who fail to fight the battle he was born to fight, who failed to be a hero he was born to be, who failed to survive in a world that survival is the ultimate goal.

Always remember, this world is like battle-field you must be a hero before you survive.

Never ever let even the word suicide pops into your head while you’re into bad mood or in sad mood, talk less of the idea of suicide.

Best way to get rid of worry is to find someone who you can share your worry with, don’t you have a best friend or companion?.

Owing a good close friend is paradise, what I mean is friend who is always with you, who is your supporter in happiness and sadness, whom you share all kind of moments with.

Tell him/her your problems and ask his/her advices, that’s the best way of getting rid of worries.

Then why you need to lock yourself in a room and keep causing yourself more problems? Think about it.

Even if you fucked up everything, always remember if there’s life then there’s hope and he who want succeed must be ready for all life challenges.

I don’t like the idea of suicide, think of solution and enjoy your life without ruining it.
